Abbey Stamp thanked everyone who attended the What Works Conference on January 9th and noted that Juvenile Justice will be a LPSCC priority in 2015.

Antonio Lopez noted Portland Public Schools' priorities are to ensure every student reads by 3rd grade and to reduce disproportionality in exclusionary discipline.

Commissioner Shiprack noted the Oregon Joint Committee on Ways and Means co-chairs released their budget after the LPSCC meeting in January, and reminded everyone of the budget process.

Mental Health

Abbey Stamp gave an overview of the LPSCC activities related to mental health in 2013/2014.

- The December 2013 What Works Conference was “Leveraging healthcare transformation to improve behavioral health and public safety outcomes,” which led to follow-up meetings and a connection between NACo/Commissioner Shiprack with Leon Evans and the Bexar County model.
- The LPSCC Mental Health and Public Safety Subcommittee acts as the Coordinating Council for Multnomah Behavioral Health Treatment Court Initiative (DCJS grant via SAMHSA). The subcommittee is discussing information sharing needs and continues to be a resource and forum for ongoing system improvements.
- In the fall of 2014, LPSCC held meetings of high-level operations and policy staff from the county, city and external stakeholders to identify and prioritize system gaps for the co/tri-morbid population. See the one pager and spreadsheet for more information.
- Consultant Lore Joplin recently completed the Mental Health Jail Diversion Feasibility Study, which was the outcome of the FY 15 budget note.

Lore Joplin presented an overview of the Mental Health Jail Diversion Feasibility Study. The need for the project originates from the County Board of Commissioners' concerns about people with mental health issues being housed in the county's jails and the will to explore mental health jail diversion to reduce criminal justice system costs, reduce recidivism, and better treat the mental health needs of the individuals. The project consisted of interviewing stakeholders, reviewing literature, summarizing jail data, convening a stakeholder group to review the materials and prioritize recommendations, and exploring cost information. For more information about jail diversion, national and local data, the target population's race (which shows that black detainees are overrepresented in the target population), diagnoses, referrals & service encounters, booking frequency, jail utilization, system strengths and opportunities, and recommendations, see the Mental Health and Jail Diversion Presentation.

Mayor Hales wants to have more conversations about a tri-county effort versus creating a Multnomah County prototype.

noted that the automatic voter registration through DMV and continuation of clean fuel legislation will move quickly.
